7 easy steps to spot insurance fraud

Picture this: A subcontractor forges a certificate of insurance to secure work with a Front Range construction company.

Luckily, the company's general manager is savvy and informed about identifying signs of insurance fraud. The manager brought the suspicious-looking certificate to the attention of the company's insurance agent, who then contacted Pinnacol.

Had the manager not spotted the forgery, the company could have been liable for work-related subcontractor injuries. This makes it crucial for employers to be vigilant and always watch for fraud. Don't worry, it's pretty easy if you know the signs.
