Measuring safety programs: E-mods and incidence rates

Today's business world is chock-full of data. Do a little bit of digging and you can find metrics on just about anything. These metrics can help tell your company's story — where you're succeeding, where you can improve, and where you stand head and shoulders above the competition.

When it comes to workplace safety, you can measure your program using metrics such as experience modification (e-mod) and incidence rates. The more information you have, the better a handle you can get on your performance. You might be surprised by what you find out.

Once you have your arms around the numbers, it's time to take action. By taking a few simple steps, you can make a big difference on your safety culture.
